About

- Jessica Stevenson has been Principal of UTC Sheffield Olympic Legacy Park since Jan 2020, leading the college to become significantly oversubscribed with outcomes in the top quartile of University Technical Colleges nationally. She has developed strong partnerships with employers and universities in health, sport and computing, embedding industry-linked learning into the curriculum and securing consistently strong student destinations at 16 and 18.
- Previously, Jessica was Director of Inclusion at Mercia Learning Trust, where she worked across schools to improve SEND provision, and Assistant Headteacher at Newfield Secondary, where she helped transform the school from special measures to the top 20% nationally for progress. Earlier in her career she held leadership roles in arts and inclusion across London and Nottingham schools.
- She is a national Technical Teaching Fellow with the Education and Training Foundation and the Royal Commission for the Exhibition of 1851, recognised for her work in creating digital health pathways in technical education. Jessica has also worked with Sheffield City Council's Inclusion Taskforce, the Baker Dearing Trust and NHS England on employer-led innovation in curriculum design.
